Greetings, everyone. I'm Agnes from 5A. I'm honored to have the opportunity to serve as the chairperson of our English Society this year. This school year, our society has organized various fun activities, such as the English Funfair and International Interface, along with competitions like the Acrostic Poem Competition and the Penmanship Competition - that's just a few of them! Looking back on all these experiences, I feel truly proud to be part of such a lively and supportive community where we learn and grow together. As we move forward, I hope everyone continues to enjoy learning English, not just for grades, but as a way to express themselves and have fun! I believe that the English Society will keep thriving and inspiring more students in the future.

It has been a great honor to serve as the Vice Chairperson of the English Society this year. We organised various activities, including the Funfair, Fun English with Ms Cindy, and Acrostic Poem Competition. Our members participated actively and showed great enthusiasm. I am glad to see everyone becoming more confident in speaking English and expressing their ideas. Supporting members and helping to organise these events has been a valuable experience for me. I have improved my organisational, speaking, and communication skills. In the future, I hope we can continue to hold meaningful activities, grow together, and encourage more students to join our English Society.

On behalf of our committee, I would like to sincerely thank all our schoolmates who have taken the time to participate in our events. Your support, enthusiasm, and active involvement have made every activity truly meaningful and successful. We will continue to do our best to organise more engaging and enjoyable activities for everyone. Thank you once again for your continuous support.

During the morning assembly, I introduced Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone to the whole school. Before the assembly, I had practised many times at home and during recess because I wanted my speech to sound clear and professional. I felt excited to share the story with my schoolmates, but I was also very nervous because everyone could hear my voice.

At the beginning of my speech, I was worried about my pronunciation and afraid of making mistakes. I was afraid I might pronounce the characters' names wrongly or speak too softly. However, using a microphone made me feel less stressed, and I could focus on reading clearly. Even though I made a small mistake in the middle, my sharing still went very smoothly.

While standing on the stage, I could feel my heart beating rapidly. As I continued speaking, I slowly became calmer and more confident. Seeing my schoolmates listening quietly made me feel encouraged. I realised I was able to complete the speech on my own, which gave me a strong sense of achievement.

Through this experience, I learned that practice is crucial. I realised that confidence can be improved with preparation. I felt proud of myself that I had the courage to speak in front of the whole school. Overall, this experience was valuable and meaningful, and I am grateful to share such an inspiring story with everyone.

ENGLISH TUESDAY

SPEAK & TREAT WITH CINDY

After participating in this fun English activity, I experienced the joy of learning through interesting vocabulary exercises. I was completely immersed in the language in a relaxed atmosphere. During the conversation, I felt the charm of language and naturally learned many practical words and authentic expressions.

The whole process was pleasant and without any sense of restraint. Through free dialogue, I bravely practised oral communication and learned many useful daily English words and sentences. I truly felt the enjoyment that speaking English can bring.

I hope students can believe in themselves and join such easy chat activities. I also hope to have more opportunities in the future to consolidate my knowledge through relaxed conversations and steadily improve my English ability. I like this vivid and interesting way of learning because we can gradually accumulate knowledge and continuously improve our English expression in a cheerful environment.

On 3rd March, our school hall was filled with laughter during the school English assembly. We were fortunate to invite Mr. Vivek Mahbubani, a Hong Kong-born Indian comedian, to deliver an unforgettable English stand-up comedy show. It was not just entertainment — he skillfully used humor to teach us valuable lessons about diligence and perseverance.

Vivek began by sharing amusing stories about his cultural background. He joked about how surprised people are when they realise he has very local habits, which made everyone laugh. He also spoke about the challenges of learning English. By making fun of grammar rules and sharing his own embarrassing mistakes, he helped reduce our fear of English exams. He showed us that learning a language can be enjoyable rather than stressful.

Behind the laughter was an important message about personal growth. Vivek reminded us that success comes from hard work and constant practice. Just as comedians improve their jokes after failure, students should learn from mistakes and keep trying when facing difficult exams.

Vivek taught us that a positive mindset can turn challenges into opportunities. We left the hall not only feeling joyful but also inspired to face future obstacles with courage and perseverance.

STAND-UP COMEDY

FUNFAIR

2A Jayden Lau

Being a booth staff member at the English Fun Fair was a truly meaningful experience for me. Although it was challenging at first, it became an unforgettable learning journey.

Due to limited preparation time, I felt quite nervous before the event. I was not very confident in speaking English and had not fully memorised the game instructions. I was worried about making mistakes in front of others. However, with the support of my teammates, we quickly discussed our plan and clearly divided our responsibilities. Their encouragement helped me feel more at ease.

When visitors came to our booth, I tried my best to explain the rules in simple English and invite them to participate. At first, I spoke slowly and occasionally forgot some words. To my surprise, the students were patient and understanding. We even shared laughter when small mistakes happened. Gradually, I became more relaxed, and my confidence grew with each interaction.

Through this experience, I learned that confidence is built through practice and courage. The English Funfair not only improved my communication skills but also taught me to step out of my comfort zone. It was a valuable opportunity for growth, and I am grateful to have been part of it.

My first experience of participating in an English drama performance left a deep mark on me. It was not only a chance to improve my English skills but also a journey of growth and teamwork.

Unlike reciting texts, drama requires emotions, proper intonation and pauses. At first, I often stumbled over long sentences and could not express the character's feelings well, which made my performance stiff. I used my spare time to practice my lines and gradually understood the character's personality and emotions. Step by step, I became more confident.

Rehearsals were tiring but meaningful. We used after-school and weekend time to practice. From stage movements to cooperation between roles, every detail needed repeated polishing. Sometimes we argued over small parts or felt exhausted, but no one gave up. Instead, we encouraged one another and worked hard to make the drama smoother and more vivid. Through this process, I broke through my shyness and learned the true meaning of teamwork.

On the performance day, I felt nervous yet excited. Standing on the stage, my heart beat very fast. However, once the music started, I focused on my role. When the curtain fell and the audience applauded warmly, I felt a great sense of achievement.

This experience not only improved my speaking skills, but also helped me gain precious friendships and learn that success comes from constant effort.

INTERNATIONAL INTERFACE

I had an unforgettable yum cha experience with our American friends at a local dim sum restaurant in Hong Kong. We were excited to introduce them to this traditional Cantonese dining culture and share one of our favourite activities.

After arriving at the restaurant, we carefully selected a variety of dim sum, including siu mai, barbecued pork buns, shrimp dumplings, and turnip cake. Each dish was freshly prepared and beautifully presented, which made us even more eager to taste them. The restaurant was lively and full of energy, with the sounds of people chatting and the fragrance of freshly steamed dishes filling the air. The warm and bustling atmosphere made the experience even more enjoyable and truly authentic.

While waiting for the food to be served, we talked happily about our hobbies, school life, and future plans. I especially enjoyed chatting with Caleb, who surprised me by saying how much he loved yum cha — especially its rich tea culture. He was curious about how we traditionally drink tea during dim sum.

This experience reminded me how meaningful it is to share our culture with friends from different backgrounds. Watching them try new dishes and hearing their reactions made me feel proud of our traditions. The laughter and conversations made the afternoon truly special. It was not just a meal, but a beautiful memory of friendship and cultural exchange that I will always treasure.

We had some visitors come to our classroom and lead a lesson, and it was very different from our usual English classes. They began with a Bible riddle, which I found quite challenging at first. However, they patiently guided us through it step by step. Although we were shy at first, it turned out to be really enjoyable and fun.

What I appreciated most was the relaxed atmosphere. We were not just sitting and listening — we were talking, laughing, and actively participating. It did not feel like a formal lesson; instead, it felt like spending time with friendly guests who happened to speak English.

I learned some new words and expressions naturally during the session. More importantly, I felt more confident speaking English. I am truly grateful for the opportunity to meet them.

INTERNATIONAL INTERFACE

Last year, right after the second-term exam, I joined our school's exchange program to Colorado, USA. My goal was simple: to learn about cultures beyond my own. Little did I know, this trip would teach me far more than I had ever expected.

One of our core activities was volunteering at a local food bank. At first, I expected it to be exhausting and challenging. But to my surprise, everyone there was so friendly. Some visitors, seeing our Asian faces, warmly greeted us and asked where we came from. Despite the physical tiredness after our shift, I felt a deep sense of fulfilment inside. The saying "It is more blessed to give than to receive" truly came to life through this eye-opening experience.

The most unforgettable moment happened on our last day at the VBS school. Without prior notice, I was suddenly asked to deliver a thank-you speech on behalf of our exchange team. I was completely shocked — no one had told me beforehand. For a brief moment, my heart raced and I felt extremely nervous. But I took a deep breath, calmed myself down, and spoke sincerely from my heart. When I finished, the crowd cheered and applauded warmly.

Standing in a completely unfamiliar environment and facing a group of strangers, I managed to deliver a confident speech. The satisfaction and sense of achievement I felt in that moment were incredible and I will always be proud of.

Looking back, this trip was not just about seeing a new country. It was about stepping out of my comfort zone. It taught me that even the smallest acts of kindness — like a simple greeting or a thoughtful speech — can create warmth and connection across cultures. I hope all my fellow schoolmates will not be afraid to explore different cultures. Step out of your comfort zone and try volunteering. You will feel the warmth of the world in your heart and soul.

INTER-SCHOOL SPEAKING PRACTICE

5A Serena Ye

Recently, I participated in an inter-school speaking practice event that involved senior students from various schools. It was a valuable experience for me to improve my speaking skills and learn from others' performances.

The event included three rounds of group discussion and individual response. At the beginning, I was quite nervous, so I didn't perform well. However, I noticed other candidates' strategies. For instance, if you start the discussion first, you don't have to worry about your ideas overlapping with others. So I quickly put what I learned to use. I also learned to share my personal experiences to support my points. I saw my improvement eventually.

During the discussion, I realised the importance of active listening. By paying close attention to their opinions, I could respond more effectively and make my ideas clearer. This helped me become more confident in expressing myself. Although I was worried at first, I gradually felt more relaxed and enjoyed the process.

The key to English speaking is to express our ideas clearly and bravely. If you want to improve your English speaking, you must practice regularly and not be afraid of making mistakes. So, I think this event is perfect for all schoolmates, it is not only a good chance to improve your speaking skills, but also an opportunity to build confidence and learn from others.
